Growing Up in Diaspora – Education and Family of East African Refugees in Germany

ISBN 978-3-8474-3065-0

eISBN 978-3-8474-1999-0

This book centers on the life experiences of young East African refugees in Germany. Situated at the intersection of migration and transition research, it depicts an extensive picture of how young refugees cope with challenges related to educational and occupational participation. How do they maintain transnational familyhood amidst the institutionalized discrimination in the receiving society? The author portrays different ways of coping with transition imperatives, showing how young refugees shape their biographical trajectories with the sociocultural as well as biographical resources they have.
